Master Sergeant Cedric King Shares His Inspirational Story with Children in Overtown

Miami, FL, March 2015

Touching Miami with Love hosts Master Sergeant Cedric King as he shares his inspirational story of endurance with the students of Touching Miami with Love and Miami Bridge on Wednesday, March 18th at 4:15pm. Master Sergeant Cedric King has an incredible story having made the Army his career to have it ended in 2012 when he stepped on an IED in Afghanistan and lost both legs.

Amy Zambrano, co-founder of iPads for Soldiers, is coordinating this event having met Master Sergeant Cedric King at Walter Reed Medical Center delivering iPads to the soldiers there. "One of the most incredible people I have EVER met is Master Sergeant Cedric King. The day he got his final prosthetics, he decided he was going to learn to run and run a marathon. Later that day, the Boston Marathon was bombed, and he decided that he would run it the next year. He is BEYOND inspirational and motivating and connects SO well with kids. They are RIVETED and he talks to them about how they can overcome whatever challenges they have in their own lives."

Touching Miami with Love of Overtown and West Homestead serves the children, youth, and adults from enriching out of school programs, inspiring youth programs in the evening, and a Parent Empowerment Project in partnership with Miami-Dade Public Schools, and more. Miami Bridge Youth & Family Services, Inc., is the only 24-hour emergency shelter in the county that provides refuge, protection and specialized care to youth in crisis.

Join us as we inspire and motivate our students with this incredible testimony of courage!
